

WHAT TO DO ABOUT YOUR MONSTERS

- 1- Uh oh, it seems like little Kinzie has monsters in her room. Can you remember when they came out?
- 2- Why could Kinzie not fall asleep?
- 3- The author of this book, Jessica Woo, has an awesome writing style. She uses a lot of onomatopoeia in her book. Onomatopoeia is when a word sounds like the noise it's describing, like her words "thumpa dumpa" really sound like someone hitting a bed. Can you see any other examples of onomatopoeia in the story?
- 4- What did Kinzie do when her parents made her sleep in her own room?
- 5- Complete this sentence: Kinzie was _____ because she faced her problem.
A- Brave
B- Sad
C- Furious
- 6- What are some of the things Kinzie did to try and get the monsters to sleep?
- 7- What made the monsters finally go to sleep?
- 8- Kinzie tried so many different things before she found something that worked. Can you think of a time in your life where you had to try so many things before you got it right?
- 9- Failing is normal, and it's actually a good thing; it means you are trying. You cannot grow up to be an amazing adult without failure. Try asking your parents or guardian to tell you a story about a time they failed but kept on trying.
- 10- Draw a picture of Kinzie and/or the monsters in the story.
